rick Cavendish was conveyed to Chatsworth and buried on Thursday.

Information obtained will, it is stated, lead to the arrest of the assassin. Meetings are being held throughout Ireland denouncing the crime. There is general mourning in Dublin.

Parliament has adjourned till nine to-morrow night to enable Ministers and many of the members to attend the funeral of Lord Cavendish at Chatsworth to-morrow.

LONDON, May 12th.

In the House of Commons last night was read for the first time the Bill for the repression of crime in Ireland, by which a Commission of Judges will supercede trial by jury in the disturbed districts. The bill authorises military trials, and extends the period of imprisonment and the severity of capital punishment. The widest powers are granted for dealing with meetings of Secret Societies, and in suppressing inflammatory journals. The duration of the Bill is fixed for three years. Mr. Parnell and Mr. Dillon both voted against the stringency of the measures contained in the Bill. The Press generally approve of the Bill.

FRIDAY, May 13th.

A Times of India special telegram says that Mr. Parnell's opposition to the Government Bill of Repression in Ireland has caused much indignation in London. Mr. Parnell was compelled to apply for a body of police for protection.

LONDON, 16th May.

The House of Commons have read the first time the Bill relating to arrests of men in Ireland, by which a Commission of Judges will exhaust the appeal of the Royal Charter. The opposition to this measure will relieve the Government from further liability. It transpired during the debate that Mr. Parnell whilst in Kilmainham jail undertaken that agrarian outrages should cease and that he would generally co-operate with Government.

LONDON, 17th May.

The House of Commons last night the Twelfth read the Bill. Mr. Parnell before leaving Kilmainham jail, however, told the Government, Mr. Parnell and his colleagues denounced the charge as infamous and disgraceful, and Mr. Gladstone hotly challenged the Tories to bring forward proof of their assertion.

LONDON, 18th May.

Mr. Trevelyan has been re-elected member for Warwick unopposed.

The New York police are searching all the passenger line steamers arriving from Europe with the object of discovering the Dublin assassins.

SATURDAY, May 19th.

A Times of India special telegram says that not the least has been found of the Dublin assassins. It is believed they have made good their escape.

The compact between the Government and Mr. Parnell respecting the cessation of agrarian outrages continues in effect, which are regarded as most compromising to the Government.

ENGLISH NEWS.

LONDON, 7th May.

Her Majesty the Queen went in procession through the city yesterday, and opened Peppin Forest.

LONDON, 12th May.

A Bombay Gazette special telegram says that Mr. Leonard Courtney, the Under Secretary for the Colonies, has been appointed Secretary of the Treasury.

LONDON, 13th May.

The Daily News publishes a paragraph stating that Mr. Gladstone is about to resign the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer.

THE HON. EVELYN ASHLEY has been appointed Under Secretary for the Colonies, vice Mr. Courtney, who has resigned. Lord F. Cavendish as Under Secretary to the Treasury.

Bank Shares.—Orbital Bank, £18; Chartered Bank, £13; Mercantile Bank, £15; Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, £19.

LONDON, 14th May.

A canister filled with gunpowder, with a lighted fuse attached, was discovered outside the Mansion House last evening.

TRROUBLES IN THE SOUDAN.

CARIO, 6th May.

Severe troubles have again broken out in Soudan, the false prophet Mahdi having gathered at the head of a large force and defeated the Egyptian troops at Sennar, which town he captured, now threatening Khartoum. The provinces of Darfur and Kordofan have revolted.

THE CRISIS IN SOUDAN.

LONDON, 6th May.

A Times Paris telegram states that the Powers have agreed to the principle of Turkish intervention in Egypt, and that the sultan, possibly Halim Pasha will be substituted for Tewfik should the Powers be unanimous as to the necessity of such a step. The initiative is left to France, who will act in accord with England.

CARIO, 10th May.

Egypt is in a state of revolution. The Ministers have summoned the Chamber, without an opportunity to be present. It is considered that the deposition of the Khedive is a virtual certainty, and that he will be substituted by a man of whom the Ministers have given the formal assurance that there is no danger to the lives and property of Europeans, but in case of Turkish intervention they are resolved to defend the country.

LONDON, 10th May.

Egyptian affairs are critical. The Ministry have agreed to the principle of Turkish intervention in Egypt, and the sultan, possibly Halim Pasha will be substituted for Tewfik should the Powers be unanimous as to the necessity of such a step. The initiative is left to France, who will act in accord with England.

The initiative is left to France, who will act in accord with England.

LONDON, 12th May.

It is understood that the foreign consuls in Egypt have been instructed to demand the disbandment of the Egyptian army and the banishment of the rebellious officers. It has been ordered to Egypt.

PARIS, 14th May.

The French Squadron has left for Alexandria.

CONSTANTINOPLE, 14th May.

The Russian war indemnity is signed.

LONDON, 15th May.

The United English and French Squadrons are now on their way to Alexandria.

LONDON, 15th May.

Acting by advice of the foreign consuls, the Khedive has summoned the Ministry, with whom he has patched up an agreement.

ENGLISH NEWS.

CARIO, 24th May.

Further Maudsley reports state that Mr. Maudsley and family have been made baronets. His wife, four daughters, two sons, and two Armenian ladies, were severely beaten prior to imprisonment, and will be transported with criminal marks imprinted on their foreheads. Two Mahomedan ladies are missing. The watch which forcibly violated Kampani Menghie's youngest grand daughter when he was imprisoned, has been left off.

LONDON, 16th May.

A Times puts out a telegram stating that in case of war, all men of the British Army, and naval forces will be landed and sent to Asia Minor.

CARIO, 16th May.

Acting by advice of the foreign consuls, the Khedive has summoned the Ministry, with whom he has patched up an agreement.

HONGKONG, May 4th.

Amongst the persons seized at Kharakot are some British subjects; Mrs. Arden, widow of a commander of a British steamer, is in confinement in the palace.

The Armenian subjects are not expected to survive the fearful punishment inflicted.

HONGKONG, May 5th.

It is reported here that His Excellency the Viceroy is to be called to the British Embassy in consequence of the recent outrages. Several British subjects have been beaten, and great excitement prevails.

It is rumoured that the Government intend taking official notice of the outrages through the Chief Commissioner.

HONGKONG, 6th May.

Shahrukh Rao, a native pleader, grossly in a drunken fit, shot dead on a night train, between Venkateswar and Jaffna, and was found in the reserved compartment, and making certain incontinencies. A complaint was lodged, and the man is to be prosecuted criminally.

SINGAPORE, May 10th.

Messrs. Grant and Fitzpatrick are the Commissioners appointed to draw up the treaty with the Burmese Envoy. They have up to date only had one meeting.

EXTRACTS.

GOING TO PROPOSE.
There is something in his air
To disclose
That he's going forth to dare
Future woes.
Half resigned and half despairing,
Sighing softly, softly weeping,
On his lonely way he's faring
To propose.
Winter's tempests haven't shod
Any snows.
On that early arduous head
Of our bairn's,
Yet his steps appear to falter,
As from swift to slow they alter,
Like the minister's when Sir Walter
To no show.
On all men he glares as if
They were foes;
Slopes and steeps are his stiff
Patent toes.
Though the way's not long nor hilly
From the Strand to Piccadilly,
You would say it looked him silly,
From his pose.
Though in thought 'tis sweet
To propose,
Yet 'twould scarcely seem a treat,
Done in prose.
If we judge by the looks—full
Of forbidding, stern and mournful—
Face of him we knew so sorrowful
Of fate's bairn.
How his purpose to explain,
How composed
All the thoughts wherever his brain
Overflows,
Now he ponders. Ah! those speeches,
Mellow, soft, as ripest peaches,
Will unlovely as owl's screeches
Sound, he knows.

Number forty-four,
Very slow.
He is coming to that door
Of Miss Flie's;
Counts the figures like a cocker;
Handles gingerly the hooker—
Can it be broads to shocker?
In robes?

Though he'd place a pound on each
One of those
Steps, so might he never reach
The top row.

Yet in hasty trepidation,
Juts in a poor relation
Wears behind, on this occasion
Up the stairs.

What's the case of all these floro
Mortal throes
That his bones rock and pierce,
D'you suppose?

Why, a wimsons little fairy,
Who, in attitude, unwry,
Shows a glimpse, neath lace airy,
Of silk hose!

Defied her Lenten ash, in hue,
Like a crow's,
She appears in fresh and new
Furbolos;

And above the frock's completeness—
Negligence combined with neatness—
Smiles a face, with bloom and sweetness
Of a rose.

New face from root to hair
Brightly glows;
Well she wins his waiting there
To propose.

'Ays' will have it, need we mention?
Nor' word feminine convention
Throw out any man's intention
By this 'oos.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT COLOUR-BLINDNESS.

In the year 1790 Mr. John Dalton, the principal of a well-known school at Kendal, then about twenty-seven years, an acute and vigorous observer and thinker, walked into his garden and gathered a bunch of geraniums and roses, with which he set off into the town. On his way, a party of young ladies complimented him on the beauty and brilliancy of his flowers, but were rather faints as to their arrangement. "You have got," they said, "all the reds and greens so strongly mixed, and you a botanist, too." "For my part," said Mr. Dalton, "the whole bunch appears to be pretty much of one colour; though some of the leaves which you call 'pink' seem to be no more like white, while the dark ones would match with a stick of sealing-wax." Mr. Dalton was suffering from colour-blindness, then an unknown word, but now beginning to be talked about as something more than a curious and rare infirmity of vision. But the whole question of colour-blindness opens up to points of wide importance. First, colour-blindness it would seem, is not to be regarded as curable, or indeed as itself a disease, though possibly a symptom of disease. Dalton's eyes, after his death, were carefully examined (one actually dissected) for the purpose of ascertaining the cause of "his anomalous vision"; his idea being that such faulty sight was owing to the fact that one of the humours of his eyes was a coloured medium, probably some modification of blue. But the post-mortem proved beyond a doubt the fallacy of this theory, the vitreous humour being found absolutely free from colour. But though not a positive disease, colour-blindness would seem to be widely inherited—four brothers in one family being thus afflicted; of whom, oddly enough, three were clever wood-engravers, and the fourth, still more oddly, a painter in water-colours, which, however, he was obliged to leave labelled for him in his daily work. Statistics, too, however, imperfect, clearly prove this much—that the tendency to colour-blindness may be stayed by good diet and a healthy exercise of body, brain, and sight. One more point has yet to be noted among the statistics of colour-blindness: the singular fact that the three classes most liable to this anomalous vision are deaf-mutes, Jews, and Quakers. As regards the first of these, if it be true that freedom from the calamity depends largely upon the perfect and healthy condition of the body and brain, the low status of the deaf-mutes is at once a sufficient cause. The great majority of deaf-mutes belong to a low and debased class, for whom until recent times little has been done. Scrofula, an inherited disease, is too often the cause of their special calamity; which again they bequeath by close intermarriage to their children, thus furnishing more inhabitants for the strange world into which neither sound nor colour finds entrance. Why the descendants of the house of David, who, as a whole, are deficient neither in power, intelligence, nor culture, should be especially victims of colour-blindness is not so clear. But even among those close intermarriages is the rule rather than the exception, with its inevitable fruits. One more point, and we have done. Out of 9,200 engine drivers nearly 400 were colour-blind, i.e., more or less unable to distinguish a green signal from a red one. Further and full inquiry is therefore absolutely needed. For Mr. Gladstone yet other troubles are in store. One more point is to be added to the list of School Board Examiners. An Inspector in colour (Mr. Ruskin will choose his aesthetic role of office) must be appointed; and before any man can become a policeman, an engine-driver, a pilot, a guard, a chemist, a soldier, a weaver, or a botanist, he must undergo the ordeal of "passing" in "Holington's" skeins of coloured wool.—Cassell's Family Magazine.
